incantation v. affirmation, silver v. rust (excerpt)

... the moon preceding the brain despite the dust having been moved on it, I can't be anything but incantation,
I can't be anything but affirmation, I can't be anything but mothers singing eyelashes over the noise of the brain,
a certain beginning or ending, hooked, a man is trying to stop his thoughts with new thoughts of white pigeons, look,
the boxing match of incantation v. affirmation, the noses bled
in slow motion, the tiny drops spraying,...

November 9, 2011 (Portland, OR) — Pulliam Gallery is pleased to announce a collaborative exhibition between gallery artist Linda Hutchins and poet Endi Bogue Hartigan on view at Nine Gallery, December 1 - 31, 2011. The exhibition, silver and rust, explores a sense of intricacy and materiality in poetry and drawing. In addition to a First Thursday Reception December 1, 6:00 - 9:00 p.m., there will be an afternoon reception Sunday, December 11, 3:00 - 5:00 p.m. with two poetry-drawing call-and-response performances at 3:30 and 4:30 p.m.

The process-based exhibition by Hartigan and Hutchins will change and develop over the course of the month. Hutchins plans to draw on the gallery walls with silver thimbles on the fingers of both hands, scratching and stroking the walls to accumulate marks. Hutchins and Hartigan will respond to each other's drawing and poetry in conversation and readings, with Hutchins continuing to draw and Hartigan reading and changing out the poem appearing at the entrance to the gallery space.

Hartigan and Hutchins became acquainted with each other's work through 13 Hats, a collaborative initiative of a group of writers and visual artists. They are presenting this exhibition at the invitation of Nine Gallery member Kim Ray. Hutchins is also exhibiting this month at the lumber room in a group show, Interior Margins, and at Pulliam Gallery in an exhibition of gallery artists.
